Valentine, Valentine wherefore art thou...

Valentine's Day is the time when normally seeming men of steel turn to soufflé in a quest to woo their loved-ones with roses, chocs and huge cuddly bunny satin Valentine's cards.

Bravo celebrates Valentine's Day on Friday the 14th with a wonderful line-up of romantic classic movies starting off at 5.25pm with love blossoming for Deborah Kerr and Robert Mitchum in The Grass is Greener. Elvis Presley plays a small-town boy transformed into overnight star when he's discovered by a press Exposed!

Assassination, kidnapping, terrorism, and sabotage. Such are the pastimes of the world's Secret Services: The KGB, shadow of the pre-glasnost era and its sworn enemy, the CIA. Cold-hearted monsters with no regard for the law, moral standards or human rights, employing secret warriors to perform dirty tricks in the corridors of power ... The exaggerations of a spy novel? Or could it be the truth?

Well the cold facts are that hundreds of satellites and spy planes have littered the skies above the US, while submarines silently monitored the oceans. The giant ear of the NSA, the most secret and highly specialised service in the US, employs 100,000 agents and intercepts millions of communications on its vast electronic listening network. The frightening truth is that the modern day spy has an amazing arsenal at his or her disposal thanks to electronics, audiovisual technology and miniaturisation. Greed, blackmail and flattery: the stuff of fiction? Who really are the men in the shadows? Secret Services answers these questions and exposes the masters of espionage, this month on the Discovery channel. Secret Services screens on Wednesday 5th and 12th at 10pm and Friday 7th and 14th of February at 7pm.

Winter Olympic Games

Gone are the days when skiing was a sport just for the rich and famous. There are now around 1.5 million skiers in Britain alone who take to the European slopes for their annual ski-fix! Not a bad figure for a bunch of flatlanders but such is the attraction to this fun and exhilarating sport, that when you've braved a steep mighty white once, you'll be back for more!

Whether a true enthusiast or armchair skier, prepare to be dazzled by an amazing display of strength, skill and endurance by the world's top athletes in the 1992 Winter Olympic Games. Albertville, France is the setting for the championships and Eurosport will be screening 160 hours of non-stop live sports action with over 70 hours dedicated to gripping live skiing events.

The Games incorporate over ten exciting main sporting events including: Downhill, the fastest and most physically demanding discipline where speeds exceed 70mph and 1/100 of a second make a difference between winning and losing! Then there's the Slalom with the emphasis more on technique, agility and balance as skiers negotiate springloaded control-gates at high speed and at acute angles.

Freestyle skiing incorporates three events: Ballet, Aerials and Moguls and it is at this Winter Olympic Games that the Moguls event, for the first time, has full medal status.

Ballet and Aerials will be exciting demonstration events as they were at the Calgary Olympics in 1988.

The Games also focus on the men's and women's Biathlon (a combination of cross-country skiing and target shooting), skijumping, figure and speed skating, luge, bobsleigh and the tremendously entertaining game of ice hockey. Eurosport's coverage of the Games opens with the first ice hockey match of the competition between Canada and France, live from Meribel, on Saturday 8th, at 3pm. Eurosport's comprehensive coverage of the Winter Olympics will also include regular highlights of all sporting events transmitted the same day and on-the-spot interviews with Olympic competitors. Coverage continues right the way through to the hockey final, the ultimate event of the Games on the 23rd, followed by the spectacular closing ceremony.

Norway and Sweden are tipped to rake in the medals. However, there can be no foregone conclusions given the unpredictability of mountain weather, the performance of equipment and that of the athletes too. So will Britain's Martin Bell and the British Ski Team have an inkling of a chance of a medal? Switch on to Eurosport to find out — the Opening Ceremony of the 1992 Winter Olympic Games starts at 5.30pm, Saturday 8th February.

Malinga the stinger?

AFTER MUCH soul searching Chris Eubank is back in the ring this month. Michael Watson has been struggling to recover from his coma and the damage Eubank inflicted on him in their September clash for the vacant WBO super-middleweight title has hung heavily with the victor.

'I was so unsure of myself that I couldn't even make up my mind where to park my car at nights,' he has said.

But Eubank decided a U-turn was not for him. People have questioned his right to be world champion and he probably feels he has something to prove. So he will face little-known South African Sugar Boy Malinga at the National Indoor Arena in Birmingham on 1 February.

Malinga could be an awkward opponent for the much-maligned Eubank. He has had 32 wins in 38 fights and has never been stopped inside the distance.

Malinga has the unassuming ambition of one day owning an off-licence, but only after he has taken a world title belt.

He is a father of four. As a child himself, he worshipped

Muhammad Ali. Whether he can sting like a bee remains to be seen.

The fight will be a stern mental test for Eubank. The crowd's reaction to him could be unsettling.

'People seem to either love him or hate him,' says George Zeleny, who was Screensport's ringside interviewer until new regulations banned interviews there.

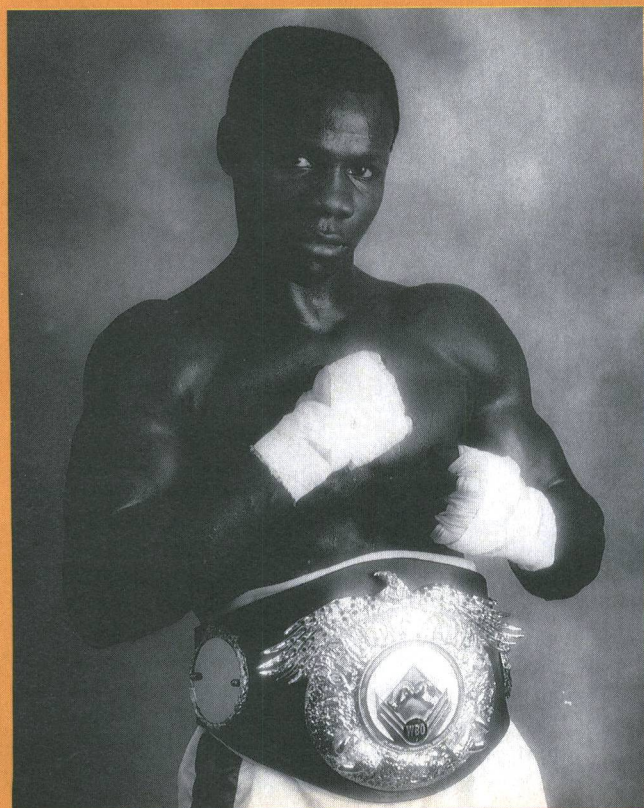

'Personally, I like the fact that he has attracted people back to boxing. And on top of that, you don't have to spend too much time with him away from the ring to realise that he's not the arrogant man you see on TV.' If Eubank, aged 25, and Nigel Benn win their February fights (Benn's opponent was not known as Cable Guide went to press) a big payday could bring them together again.

Eubank beat Benn in November 1990 and Benn has not been the same man since.

Both men fight live on Screensport this month. ■

▲ Battles await Patrick Swayze and Lesley-Anne Down

Friends and enemies

IN MAY of 1861, the American Civil War began, bringing to the boil an ideological conflict that had simmered since the earliest colonial days. Following on from its devastating prequel, North and South – Book II shows how the encroaching war puts a strain on the already flimsy relationship between the Main and Hazard families, and eventually brings them into open conflict. In the meantime, Orry Main's sweetheart, Madeline, is abducted by her previous husband, the demented wife-abuser Justin la Motte. Starring Patrick Swayze as Orry Main, Lesley-Anne Down as Madeline and David Carradine as la Motte, with great support from Olivia de Havilland and Jean Simmons. ■

CNN Is ACE

● GLOBAL CABLE news network CNN has been awarded the 'Golden ACE', the cable industry's highest honour, for its coverage of the Gulf War. It is the second time in three years that CNN has received such recognition from its peers.

In 1989 it won the same award for its coverage of the student uprisings in Beijing.

'We are exceptionally proud to have been recognised by the Cable Academy with the Golden ACE,' says Tom Johnson, President of CNN. 'The Persian Gulf conflict was a particularly difficult story to cover and we are appreciative that our efforts to provide a global audience with balanced, timely and comprehensive reporting have been honoured with this important award.' The Golden ACE is presented by the National Academy of Cable Programming. ■

Sackett and see!

● BASED ON two novels by the acclaimed western writer Louis L'Amour, The Sacketts is a sprawling sage-brush saga following the fortunes of the three Sackett brothers in the post-Civil War west. Among the stars saddled up for action are Sam Elliott, Tom Selleck, Glenn Ford and Ben Johnson. ■

● WIT, RACONTEUR and sometime actor Peter Ustinov is an ideal tour guide for The Mozart Mystery. The multi-talented Ustinov (he's also a director-playwright-screenwriter of Russian parentage) hosts a two-part musical biography of Mozart that takes him to the cultural hot spots of Europe, including Salzburg, Vienna, Paris, London and Munich. ■

▲ Rock Hudson as the most powerful man in the world

A world on the rocks

● ROCK HUDSON made one of his last screen appearances in the two-part mini-series World War III in 1982.

This fine doomsday thriller is about a Russian invasion of Alaska to seize the oil pipeline in retaliation for a US grain embargo.

Hudson plays the US President-by-accident whose diplomacy could launch a nuclear holocaust. David Green and David Soul also star and Brian Keith gives a great performance as the world-weary Secretary General of the USSR. Real life tragedy hit the set when director Boris Sagal was killed during location filming.

Discounting TV series, Hudson went on to make one more cinema film (The Ambassador) and one more TV movie (The Vegas Strip Wars) before becoming the first major show-business figure to die of AIDS in 1985. ■

A right Royal Sunday

JOIN The Discovery Channel for a day of celebration of the glory, tragedy and drama of 20th-century monarchy.

Glittering Crowns looks back on Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, the abdication of Edward VIII, King George surveying London's blitzed streets, the lavish wedding of King Juan Carlos and, of course, the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

A King's Story recalls a fairy tale romance that rocked an empire and led to the historic abdication of 1936. This two-hour special looks at the lives and love of Edward VIII and Wallis Simpson, a true love story as dramatic as any fiction.

As Edward and Wallis left the world stage, a 10-year-old girl suddenly found herself in direct line of succession to the English throne. Based on a book by royal biographer Elizabeth Longford, Elizabeth R shows how this shy princess coped with the enormous responsibility of becoming Queen, and includes rare and intimate insights into the Queen's life from her friends and family.

Some 300 years of Romanov rule came to an end when Tsar Nicholas and his family were assassinated in Russia in 1918. All traces of the family's existence were officially erased, but in 1990 Soviet people learned some of the truth about their last Tsar when President Gorbachev authorised an extraordinary exhibition of archives, including films, private letters, photographs and diaries from the Romanov's collection. An interview with the exiled Grand Duke Wladimir, the last surviving Romanov, bears witness to The Romanov Inheritance.

Finally, Free Fall has royalty

A flying visit!

Strictly for the birds: Dieter in disguise

WHEN CAMERAMAN Dieter Plage worked on Pelican Flyway he became a man with a mission.

Not only did he fly alongside the birds in a chopper, but he spent many hours in the water hidden inside a dummy pelican. His birdbath worked well and he managed to get some incredible waterline shots.

The programme set out to uncover the mystery of remote Lake Shala in the Rift Valley of Ethiopia. On the lake there is a tiny island which is usually hidden in a heat haze.

Bird expert Leslie Brown and US scientist Emil Urban made the hazardous 10-mile journey across the often stormy lake to see what was there. They found 10,000 Great White Pelicans.

But what were the birds doing on a lake that had no fish in it to feed on?

TOP OF THE BILL

IF THE gigantic Shoebill didn't exist, Lewis Carroll might have had to invent it.

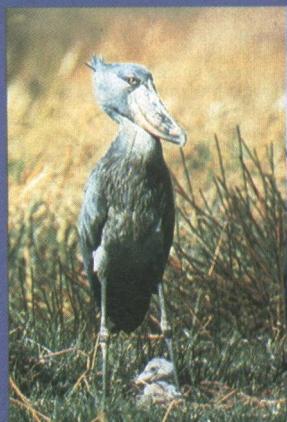

With its grotesque pterodactyl-like head, it belongs to Alice's Wonderland, along with the griffon and dodo. The shoebill, or Whale-headed Stork, lives in the tropical swamps of Africa. It was rarely seen and no one had filmed its private life until wildlife photographer Cindy Buxton ventured into the Bangweulu Swamp in Zambia. Knowing the Shoebills were there was one thing; finding them, another.

Luckily, she had the help of the only Westerner living in the Swamps, a Canadian biologist studying the marsh antelope. Even so, she had to operate largely on her own, making the search by airboat and canoe, among elephant, lion and buffalo, and constantly pestered by leeches. ■

What on Earth!

The experts discovered that the pelicans used the island because it gave them security as a breeding colony. They were prepared to fly 20 miles to another lake to fetch the tons of fish they needed for their young.

But there was a snag. Between the lakes was a 6000ft mountain range for the pelicans to cross.

This film is the story of their flyway and how they overcame its mountainous obstacles by using thermals — rising columns of hot air — to soar over the peaks and go on to deliver their food parcels. ■

Because you have two hands and not four

If your office PC makes you feel like this then it's not increasing productivity, it's slowing you down.

What it should be doing is letting you flick quickly from word processor to spread sheet to calculator, in fact to any application you choose.

It should be letting you do more than one job at a time.

In short it should be like your desk, just reach for the thing you need: pen, calculator, ledger ...

Many PCs can do all this for you by opening windows into individual applications. As many windows as you want.

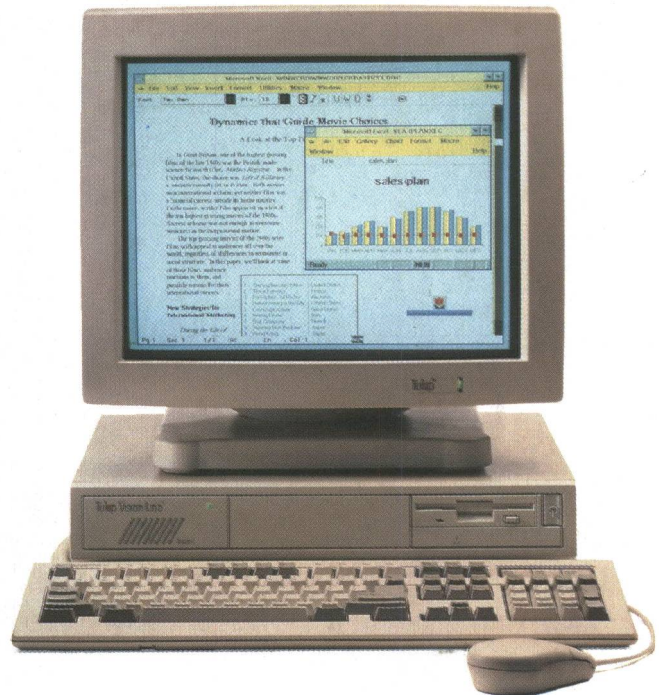

It works like this. Open the window to your calculator, make your computation, then close the window and go on drafting your quotation. All at the click of a mouse.

But, like desks, computer screens become cluttered – windows overlay windows overlaying windows ...

Only one PC has the speed, the power and the big, high-resolution screen you need not just to beat the clutter but to make the very most of the entire Windows concept.

But then only one PC manufacturer is solving real productivity problems instead of fretting about the competition.

Winter Olympics XVI

in this mountain!

Here, in full evening dress, is the setting of the Olympic bobsleigh and luge events at La Plagne in the French Alps. From 8 to 23 February, 2000 athletes at La Plagne and 12 other venues around Albertville are competing for Olympic glory. Who ends up being over the moon when the 57 gold medals are hung around winning necks can be seen on Eurosport's unrivalled 24-hour coverage of each day of the games (see the Sports Diary, starting on page 112, for programme details). Cable Guide spoke to Britain's top competitors in two of the most dangerous events, downhill skiing and bobsleigh. Interviews by Robin Jarossi

ALBERTVILLE 92.

Olympic record

EUROSPORT

● 'IN 1992 EUROSPORT will without doubt be the Olympic channel,' says Jean-Claude Dassier, the network's director of programming. Eurosport has put together a marathon television package for the Olympics that includes live coverage of all the main events from both Albertville and Barcelona with every event being shown on the day it occurs. ■

● WINTER GAMES COVERAGE starts at 8.00am on Saturday 8th with a special preview called The Road to Albertville. The first event, an ice hockey match between France and Canada, will be transmitted live before the opening ceremony at Albertville at 3.00pm. ■

● OVER 160 HOURS of live sports action will be shown, representing more than half of the total coverage from Albertville (hosting speed skating and ice dancing) and other venues like Les Arcs (speed skiing), Courchevel (ski jumping and Nordic combined) and Val d'Isere (men's alpine skiing). ■

● SUMMARIES and highlights of each day's major events together with expert analysis of the action will be given. Plus on-the-spot interviews with competitors. ■

● THIS IS MAGIQUE, the official mascot of the Albertville games. It was designed with children in mind and, according to the organisers, is meant to 'send us off to the land of dreams and imagination'. A bit like crashing your bobsleigh at 80mph. ■

● THIS IS the last Winter Olympics to be held in the same year as the Summer Games, so that the next celebration will be in 1994 (at Lillehammer, Norway). ■

● NINE ADDITIONAL events are taking place at the Albertville games, comprising freestyle mogul skiing for men and women, short-track speed skating for men and women (two events each) and three biathlon events for women. ■

● MAINTAINING TIGHT security will be a huge job, with one million spectators swarming over a large area of Savoie. The French have drafted in 2000 national policemen (CRS, intelligence and customs), 1000 civil defence members (fire brigade, mine clearance and the like), 2000 soldiers and 2800 gendarmes. ■

Blade runner

▲ As good as gold? Mark Tout hopes so

In 1987 Mark Tout needed 50 stitches in his head after a bobsleigh crash. This month he's the driving force behind Britain's best bob team for 28 years

TRADITION has it that the first bobsleigh was the invention of holidaying Englishmen. In 1890 they were in St Moritz, Switzerland, and decided to modify a sleigh to carry two or four men speedily down an improvised track.

A craze became a sport and ever since people from these shores have watched the Alpine countries excel at it. With the exception of Tony Nash and Robin Dixon at Innsbruck in 1964, Great Britain has always been an also-ran in bobsleigh events.

In the intervening 28 years, no Olympic GB team has finished higher than 10th.

But this month, Britain is hotly fancied to be a serious Olympic contender again.

After four World Cup events this season, Britain's top bobsleighter Mark Tout is ranked second in the four-man and third in the two-man (the final round is at St Moritz after the Olympics).

Live bobsleigh on Eurosport:
2-man on 15th and 16th
4-man on 21st and 22nd

No one has mentioned gold yet. But Britain has a top-group Olympic ranking and Tout has beaten everyone this year except combined world champ Gustav Weder of Switzerland (and his start is not too impressive these days).

'We've got a very realistic chance of winning a medal now, particularly in the four-man,' says Tout.

THE UPSURGE in Britain's fortunes has caused sideways-glancing rival team coaches to loiter that much longer by Tout's bobs these days. Not that British equipment is ever left unattended. Sabotage is not unheard of.

The secret of Tout's success is a mix of several developments.

After the destruction of the Berlin Wall, Britain was able to gain the services of East German coach Horst Hornlein, who had guided his country to dozens of Olympic, World and European medals.

'With Horst coming over we've learned a few secrets,' says Tout, a 30-year-old corporal in the 2nd Royal Tank Regiment. 'The difference he's made to us is in his attention to detail.'

'In my last race, I was five-hundredths of a second behind third place. You can't measure five-hundredths of a second in terms of distance on the track. It just exists on the clock.'

'So now we look at every single aspect of the sport.' If there's a one-hundredth of a second to be found, Hornlein will find it.

'Horst organises everything so that it happens tickety-boo,' Tout explains. 'Our runners are kept to maximum temperature allowed, everything's cleaned to perfection, everything's there at the right time. All we have to do on the day is our job.'

Britain and other countries are now also able to use the best East German sleighs. Sleigh regulations have been standardised so there's little difference between the machines each team uses.

Tout says: 'The rules for the bob are designed so that there aren't any grey areas about the machines, whereas there have been in the past. It's just down to the guys pushing and driving the bobsleigh, not who has the best equipment.'

With so much depending on team performance, the third new feature of the British set-up has been crucial.

Since last year psychologist Peter Terry has worked with Tout and his colleagues.

'He's helped me tremendously and become a good friend,' says Tout.

'It's always the mental side that lets you down. So we do a lot of work on concentration, focusing and relaxation.'

TOUT, who grew up in Cambridge, joined the army just before his 17th birthday and got into bobsleighting because his regiment had a crew in the 1980 Lake Placid Olympics. He had a trial and went on to Sarajevo 84 and Calgary 88.

'I was a brakeman for four years and then I started ▲ Top speed is 90mph. The brake is only used to stop at the finish, not to slow down on the 19 bends at La Plagne driving and got my team together,' he says. Learning to steer a crew down an ice track at 80mph had its upsets.

'I had an accident in 1987 and had 50 stitches put in my head,' Tout remembers. 'The bob turned over and my helmet came off. My head got rubbed down a wall for a short distance.'

'If you have a sport that involves high speeds eventually something's going to go wrong.'

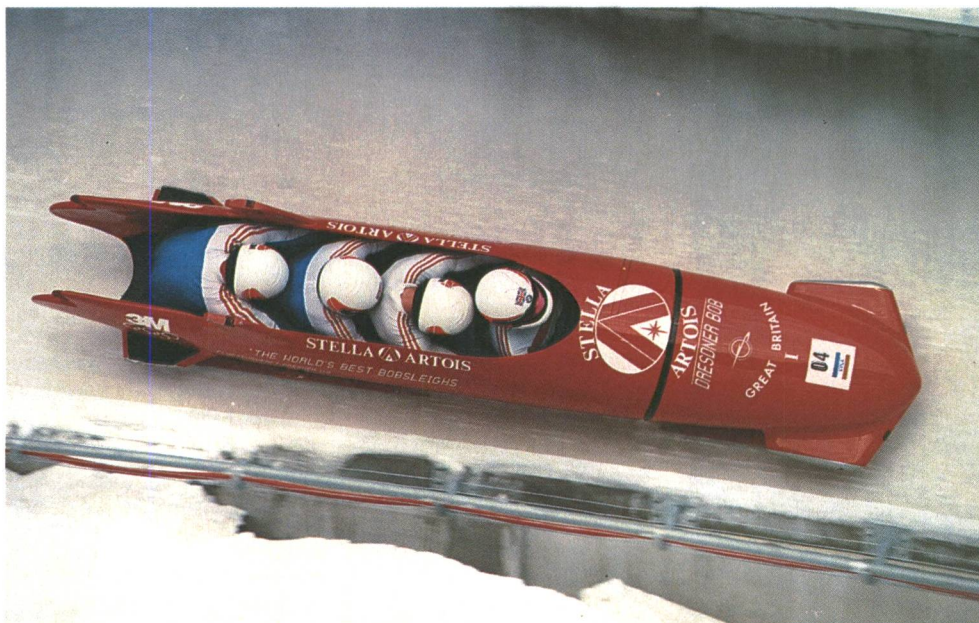

But Tout went on to enhance his skills and experience, thanks largely to the army, which allows him the time for year-round practice and training.

A modest estimate of the cost of putting a four-man team on the ice is £50,000 a year, so the final pieces of the team's set-up are team sponsors Stella Artois and individual-member sponsors like Tout's Save and Prosper.

Additional sponsorship is being sought to develop a British prototype bob. Tout says: 'The plan is to go to the 94 Olympics and win a medal in a British bob. That would be perfect.' ■

Ronald Duncan's uphill struggle

Chasing Olympic success has been a bumpy ride for Ronald Duncan, Britain's top downhill racer

BRITISH SKIERS rightly command much more respect from their Alpine rivals than Eddie the Eagle ever did. But they also get few more backers in the Olympic medals race than the bespectacled ski-jumper managed.

Britain has never won a World Cup ski event or any Olympic medal. Their counterparts from the Alps have a mountainous headstart in terms of finance, resources and technical back-up.

At a time when traditional Olympic amateurism is thinner than oxygen on the ski slopes, continental competitors marvel at the motivation of Britons competing in one of the most dangerous events.

Live men's skiing on Eurosport : downhill 9th, combined downhill 10th, combined slalom 11th, super G 16th, giant slalom 18th

Ronald Duncan is this country's number-one Alpine skier.

After years of struggling against the odds he crashed badly at Saalbach in early 1991 and while lying in his hospital bed considered chucking in the sport.

 Ronald Duncan riding high

At the start of this season in December, however, he was pursuing the dream of upsetting the form books at Albertville.

THE 29-YEAR-OLD from Dundee lay in hospital with scores of stitches in a buttock that had been cut to the bone.

'I was very much considering giving it up,' says Duncan.

'I had a friend who had been killed the week before and I was millimetres away from losing the use of my leg. That's when I decided to raise money.'

Duncan had the nerve to be a downhill skier, mastering the breathtaking surges and ebbs in speed — between, say, 30 and 80mph — over a course of varying turns and jumps. What he lacked was good equipment and support.

The rich Austrian or Swiss teams drive to events in BMWs or they get flown to them.

'They all get paid by their nations,' says Duncan, who's also known as 'Boris' by his colleagues.

'The Italians get about £20,000 a year. The Swiss get more.'

The Austrians may have a team of around 50 at a World Cup event, including 10 racers with the rest being coaches or servicemen. And each back-up man will represent a company supplying a specific piece of equipment. 'If you're an Austrian it's easier,' says Duncan. 'If you have a problem there is someone to sort it out for you.'

 Will Duncan have something to smile about at Albertville?

The British presence will amount to six or perhaps eight, half of them racers, half coaches. It's the do-it-yourself approach to international competition.

So once out of hospital, Duncan tried to double his annual racing budget to £20,000 and get better equipment.

He receives a pittance from official sources, his parents have helped out with £5000 and he's added £2000 of his savings.

Moreover, he talked German ski manufacturers Volkl into backing him. He also set up a ski conferencing and corporate hospitality business, Ski Monday, with Britain's other top skiers, the Bell brothers, Martin and Graham, and Konrad Bartelski.

And he found himself £10,000 in sponsorship from a property research company called APR.

In August Duncan won the Chilean championships and the Continental Cup, beating two Olympic champions and a world champion. His world ranking in the downhill rocketed 60 places to 27th.

'I HOPE TO keep going all the way,' Duncan says.

When it's remembered that countries like Norway spend about £100,000 a man, it's been a minor triumph for Duncan to place himself among the world's best.

He's proved in the past that he can confound expectations. In 1983 he dropped out of competitive skiing to do a physics MA at Cambridge. Three years later he made a comeback at the highest level with little official encouragement.

When Cable Guide spoke to Duncan before the start of this season, he had skied a noticeable 1.2 seconds behind world champion Franz Heinzer of Switzerland.

But he has on occasion beaten every other top skier.

So could he be among the Olympic medals?

Given the breaks, he firmly believes he can peak in Albertville . . . ■

Known throughout the world, The Wombles have achieved widespread popularity.

Loved by people of all ages, these furry creatures were among the first children's characters ever to take care of the environment. And they also spend a lot of time taking care of the place where they live – a large park in a London suburb which is now famous for its annual tennis tournament, Wimbledon.

But while others play, the Wombles – Orinoco,

Great Uncle Bulgaria, Tobermory and friends – have work to do. And they never throw things away that they can use.

Other people's cast-offs, like sewing machines, old bicycle parts and sweet papers, are always put to good use by these tidy and industrious creatures.

In their own words, they are always 'making good use of things that everyday folk leave behind'. ■

SOLD DOWN THE RIVER

1854. AFRICA is a mysterious continent of strange beauty and exotic danger. Few westerners have dared to venture into its interior.

Then English aristocrat John Hanning Speke (Iain Glen) meets Richard Francis Burton (Patrick Bergin), a celebrated adventurer who would later translate the Karma Sutra and Perfumed Garden erotica. Together they set out to solve one of the world's greatest mysteries – the source of the Nile.

Attacked and wounded in a bloody battle with fierce tribesmen, they manage to escape, becoming close friends as they make their way back to England.

But the desire to find the legendary lake that feeds the Nile is stronger than ever, and they return to the heart of Africa on a gruelling two-year expedition, encountering remote villages untouched by western civilisation.

This is the incredible story of exploration and betrayal that unfolds in Bob Rafelson's movie Mountains of the Moon, the name given to the snowcapped peaks where the Nile was believed to originate. It's a pity the mountains are not actually shown in the film.

Never mind, there's plenty of African scenery, loads of action, and an intriguing and thought-provoking comment on the miserable realities underlying the 19th-century's heroic age of exploration. ■

● PLAIN JANE

IRIS KING is an 18-stone battleaxe in her mid-50s who swears and has a face like Les Dawson in drag.

She struggles to maintain some respectability in the squalor of her area of Middlesbrough but is dismayed when she discovers her daughter is five months pregnant. Iris personally organises a back-street abortion.

Iris is a figure of fiction and when Hollywood turned its attention to her a very powerful part was made available for some lucky actress.

But who could fill Iris's role? Roseanne Barr, perhaps? What about Misery's Kathy Bates?

Hollywood, with its impeccable eye for detail, considered Barbra Streisand and Mary Tyler Moore before settling for Jane Fonda.

That's right, Jane Fonda of workout fame and the cosmetic surgery was thought to be ideal for a character who is fat enough to pin down her husband and fight off a rapist. Out went the abortion and the poverty.

Of course the Teesside accents might have caused Jane and her co-star Robert De Niro some problems, so the location was switched to New England.

Iris teaches illiterate Stanley (De Niro) to read and within five months he is literate enough to be head-hunted by a Detroit motor company boss who declares him a genius.

Pat Barker is the author of Union Street, the story of Iris but not Stanley as he was not in the book. She was reported to have been amazed at how Iris had shaped up.

Hollywood's not called the Dream Factory for nothing. ■

Bruce is a box-office die-hard

IN 1988 HUNKY Bruce Willis could do no wrong.

Having struggled over 14 difficult years to rise from theatrical obscurity, he beat 3000 actors to win the lead in Moonlighting in 1985, and crashed through as an action star in 1988 with the devastating Die Hard.

Since then, though, it's all gone horribly wrong. Jeered on set, slated by the press and ignored at the box office, Bruce Willis is no longer flavour of the month.

Since making his dynamic entrance in Die Hard, he has also experimented with more dramatic roles, including In Country, Mortal Thoughts (with wife Demi Moore), the ill-fated Bonfire of the Vanities, and the disastrous Hudson Hawk, which was described by critics as 'a major turkey'.

'I've only done two action movies', says Bruce, 'but because those films had such a high profile, the perception seems to be that I am an action-movie star.'

Nevertheless, in a prime example of 'If you can't beat 'em, join 'em', Bruce plunged back into the genre that had brought him the most success with Die Hard II: Die Harder in 1990.

In an attempt to foil a corrupt CIA plot to spring a drug-running Noriega clone who is on his way back to the good old US of A to stand trial, Bruce takes on a traffic warden, a nasty police chief, a platoon of killer mercenaries, a speeding jet and an airport (in this case Dulles International). Side-of-the-mouth quips and huge explosions abound.

Despite the fact that the film was only awarded one star by Halliwel's Film Guide,

▲ Bruce Willis becomes a big shot the movie bible, Willis and producer Joel Silver are now beaver away on Die Hard III, which may well prove to be the make or break point for Willis.

He should, however, be out of the blocks first this year in the gangster movie Billy Bathgate. ■

The LEAN years

'Quality rather than quantity' has to be the maxim to describe the directorial career of Sir David Lean - probably Britain's greatest individual film-maker.

Fifteen films in almost fifty years might seem a leisurely pace to go at to write yourself into the annals of cinematic history, but the sheer excellence of Lean's output justifies his tortoise tempo.

But it wasn't always like that, in fact four of his most famous films were made in just three years - and it's this quartet, representing Lean's most prolific and fruitful period, that forms Bravo's David Lean Season.

Lean's lifetime in film started in 1927 when he joined Gaumont as a teaboy, working up through clapperboy to editor - his first feature credited in 1934.

It's this editor's 'cutting edge', together with his self-confessed 'sensual pleasure of looking through a camera lens' that shows in almost every crafted scene of the much-acclaimed Brief Encounter - the story of an ill-fated liaison set in British Rail neverland where uncrowded trains always ran on time, and everyone got a seat. Alec and Laura's unfulfilled romantic interlude starts as just a speck in her eye, but inevitably ends in tears, as love finds nowhere to go beyond the tea and rock cakes of the station refreshment bar, or the local Kardomah Café. Lean gets the measure of every carefully scripted line emanating from the everquivering bottom lip of Celia Johnson, and the stoic, stiff upper counterpart of Trevor Howard. It's an absolute gem.

In the same year Lean brought another, more characteristic Noel Coward project to the screen - the delicious, light comedy classic Blithe Spirit, starring Rex Harrison as a widower, remarried, to find himself haunted by the mischievous ghost of his first wife.

Next in this feast of film is anything but Lean cuisine - in fact it's the heartiest offering of Sir David's career.

Great Expectations is a masterpiece - acclaimed by the NFT in 1969 as 'The Best Dickens adaptation, and arguably David Lean's finest film' - I concur, without the argument. The cinematography, and the masterful pace of the piece is a joy - riveting stuff, not to be missed. Last of the quartet is another Dicken's classic - Lean's breathtaking Oliver Twist - a lesson in film-making with incredible performances by Alec Guinness as Fagin and Robert Newton as Bill Sikes. Watch for young Anthony Newley, before his diction went, as the Artful Dodger. That's all for this month - happy St Valentine's, and go easy on the popcorn.

A Lean time of it

The post-war period produced some of the best films to have come out of Britain. This was due largely to the witty and inimitable pen of Noel Coward, and the first but not necessarily faltering steps of director David Lean

▼ Finlay Currie as the malevolent Magwitch menaces Pip (Anthony Wager) in Great Expectations

Noel Coward's play Blithe Spirit had already achieved instant classic status on its 1941 West End opening. The film version directed by David Lean and starring Rex Harrison, Kay Hammond, Constance Cummings and Margaret Rutherford was just as popular.

It tells of a cynical novelist whose second marriage is disturbed when the playful ghost of his first wife, Elvira, materialises during a seance held by the medium Madame Arcati.

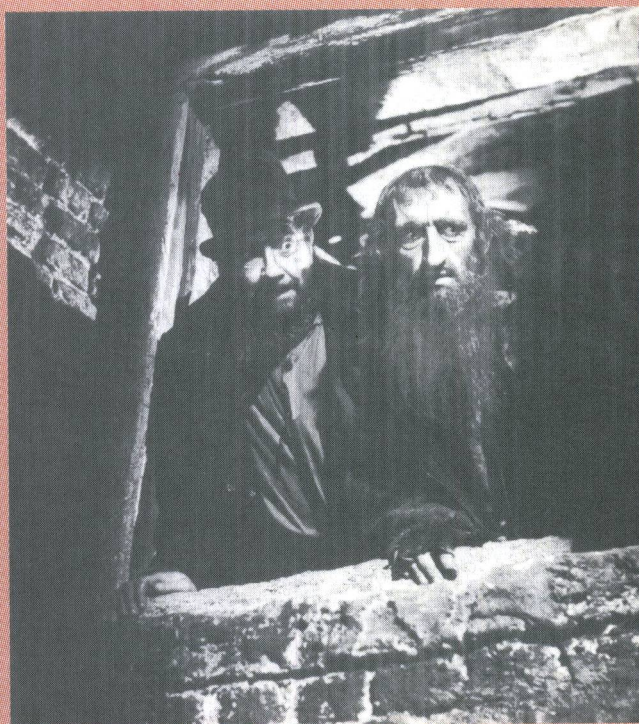

Rutherford and Hammond are marvellous as Arcati and Elvira, and Ronald Neame's special effects add a fascinating and ghostly atmosphere to this hilarious comedy.

The following year Coward once again teamed up with Lean for Brief Encounter.

Celia Johnson plays a housewife who falls in love with a local doctor. Just as they are agonising over what to do, he gets a job abroad and they agree not to see each other again.

A simple story, yes, but the love scenes between Johnson and Howard are among the most touching ever seen on film, and even the hardest heart will crumble to the strains of Rachmaninov's second piano concerto.

In addition to his mastery of contemporary comedy and romance, David Lean was no slouch when it came to the classics.

▲ Two of Britain's finest: Robert Newton and Alec Guinness in Oliver Twist

In 1946 Lean took on Charles Dickens's Great Expectations, casting John Mills, Valerie Hobson, Alec Guinness, Francis L Sullivan, Jean Simmons and the incredibly malevolent but also soft-hearted Finlay Currie.

The story begins with a boy named Pip who meets an escaped convict, Magwitch, while scurrying home along the bleak Romney Marsh seashore. Little does he know that this terrifying encounter is to result in strange life-long consequences for both of them.

This portrayal of young Pip's rags-to-riches journey through the eerie gothic world of Victorian London is a minor masterpiece.

Dickens also inspired Lean to make his 1948 offering Oliver Twist. Alec Guinness and Francis L Sullivan were on hand once again, this time assisted by Robert Newton as Bill Sikes.

When a founding falls among thieves led by the arch-fiend Fagin (Guinness) and Anthony Newley's Artful Dodger, it looks as though the young'un is doomed to a life of crime.

That's before an old gentleman appears to rescue him – but he's still not safe from the clutches of his former confederates. Guinness brings his usual touch of humour to Lean's picture of the lower depths of London, which Time magazine described as 'no less a classic than the Dickens novel which it brings to life'. ■

Long live the King

THE 1950s are memorable for many things, but at the top of the list comes devastating Rock'n'Roll music.

One of the era's greatest idols, Elvis Presley, would end up a lot wealthier and a lot heavier than when he started. Why not tune in to one of the King's earlier offerings from the days when he was still thought to be highly dangerous.

Loving You was the second in what was to be an interminable series of glossy star vehicles promoting the throat and hip muscles of the boy from Tupelo, Mississippi. The story tells of a lady publicist, played by Lizabeth Scott, who hires a young hillbilly cat from the local gas station to sing with her husband's flagging Country and Western Band.

Naturally, he turns out to be an overnight sensation, turning in explosive workouts on such rock classics as Teddy Bear and the title song. If there is such a thing as immortality then this is it. ■

▲ After club success in the early 1980s, Laura Branigan broke through with 'Gloria' in 1982

Laura's back

THE 1980s singing star turned actress Laura Branigan moved up to the big screen from the world of rock music.

Born in New York, Laura found club success in the 1980s and released her first album Branigan in 1982. It stayed in the album charts for a year and included the strident hit song Gloria. It was one of the longest-running hit singles of the decade, reaching number 1 in the US, and earning her a Grammy award nomination for Best Pop Vocal.

Branigan 2 saw her chalking up US hits in 1983, with Solitaire and How Am I Supposed to Live without You, while her third LP Self Control brought further success when The Lucky One made number 1 in the US.

Meanwhile she appeared in Hill Street Blues and sang on the soundtracks of Octopussy and Ghostbusters. Little has been heard of Laura since her fourth album release Hold Me in 1985, but fans can see her on screen again this month in HVC's rock romance Backstage.

Set in Australia and New York, Backstage is a romantic drama set in the world of showbiz that follows the fortunes of Kate Lawrence, an internationally famous American singing star, who now wants success as a dramatic actress. ■ Strip-offs!

● Currently on cinema release is the latest comic-turned-movie, The Addams Family, which was originally based on Charles Addams's strip in The New Yorker. Batman II is in production and the next superhero to be filmed is likely to be Spiderman. Hollywood producers have always read the funny pages for an insight into popular tastes. Joe Palooka, Blondie, Lil Abner, Krazy Kat, Felix the Cat, Dick Barton and Jane have all been filmed. More recently, Modesty Blaise (Monica Vitti) appeared in 1966 followed by Barbarella (Jane Fonda) in 1967. 'You'll believe a man can fly!' audiences were assured when Superman (Christopher Reeve) took off in 1978, a boast that was less likely to be believed in the Columbia serial of 30 years before when he tried to fly amid laughable special effects. Three sequels followed the Reeve film and Supergirl (Helen Slater) got in on the act in 1984. Popeye (Robin Williams) popped up in 1980. Like Superman, Flash Gordon has appeared in more than one guise. He first conquered the universe in the 1930s Universal serials. Ming the Merciless can be forgiven if he mistook Buck Rogers (1939) for Flash as both were played by Buster Crabbe, though Sam J Jones took over as Flash in 1980. The Depression era's Little Orphan Annie (Aileen Quinn) took 50 years to become a screen star in 1982. Batman was more prolific, appearing in 1943 (Lewis Wilson), 1966 (Adam West) and 1989 (Michael Keaton). And Darkman (Liam Neeson) saw the light in 1990. ■

TRACING TRACY

Chester Gould's comic detective first appeared on the big screen in the form of Ralph Byrd in several serials of the 1930s.

Tracy battled with such villains as Zarnoff (who was executed but revived by drugs in Dick Tracy's G-Men), the Spider, the Ghost, and the criminal Stark Family.

In 1945 Dick Tracy graduated from serials to feature films as Morgan Conway. In this full-length adventure our fearless hero routed a disfigured criminal named Splitface, and also came up against Cueball the following year.

In the late 1940s Ralph Byrd returned in Dick Tracy Meets Gruesome, an arch-villain played by Boris Karloff,

Madonna and Warren Beatty

Tracy framed

WARREN BEATTY'S Dick Tracy is a most ambitious bid to recreate a comic strip on the big screen.

Beatty as star/director/producer assembled a formidable crew of craftsmen (68 Oscar nominations between them) to conjure up the jut-jawed cartoon cop.

Like Chester Gould's famous comic strip, there's no tease in story build up and character development. The audience is frogmarched straight into the crossfire of non-stop action.

It's almost as though Dick Tracy had chased his hideous adversaries, like Flattop and Pruneface, off the page and on to the screen. The movie is boldly coloured and lit, the narrative is staccato.

'Our first major decision was to use only the seven primary colours Gould used in his drawings,' says Academy Award-winning production designer Richard Sylbert.

'Every yellow is the same yellow as Dick Tracy's raincoat and fedora. Every green is the same green, et cetera.'

Recruiting Madonna as gangster's moll Breathless Mahoney was a wise move by Beatty. Madonna was familiar to those young movie-goers who might ask, Warren who?

Beatty and Madonna worked on Breathless's lines to create a tough but vulnerable heartbreaker.

'Aren't ya gonna frisk me?' she asks Tracy in a performance that, along with the Oscar-winning song Sooner or Later, stole much of the limelight (Tracy also won Oscars for best art direction and best make-up).

Such lines may not have been unusual in Madonna's trailer if press stories of a torrid affair with her bashful leading man were true.

But what matters now is that Beatty's film is a revelation.

Watch out for a heavily disguised Al Pacino as Big Boy Caprice, Dustin Hoffman as Mumbles, James Caan as Spaldoni and Dick Van Dyke as DA Fletcher. This was some cover-up. ■ who steals Dr A Tomic's experimental gas in order to use it in a robbery.

Gimmicks were a vital part of the image. In 1946 Tracy first spoke into his now-legendary two-way wrist radio, and in 1947 used closed-circuit television.

By then regarded as the definitive screen Tracy, Byrd returned yet again in a live-action TV series in 1950, while the Tracy cartoon character continued into the 1970s in TV Funnies.

Chester Gould died in 1985, but he would have been comforted to know that Dick Tracy lives on, thanks to Warren Beatty. ■

Today's Choice

8.15pm The Movie Channel. Stanley and Iris. In this impeccably performed romance, Jane Fonda stars as a blue-collar widow who befriends a shy and withdrawn baker played by Robert De Niro. As the two become closer, she learns that the reason this gentle man has lived apart from regular society is due to the fact that he is unable to read. She sets about teaching him, and a cautious love affair soon follows. Star performances are bolstered by sensitive direction from Martin Ritt and a solid supporting cast headed by Swozie Kurtz and Martha Plimpton.

12.30pm Screensport. Live Forte Snooker League. The Matchroom League has grown by 10 players chosen from the world rankings and in 1992 a record 13 players will be contesting the League. Each match consists of eight frames and each player meets every other player once. A football-style format means players are awarded 3 points for a win and 1 point for a draw. The League was won by Steve Davis between 1987 and 1990, but this year's title was claimed for the first time by world number 1 Stephen Hendry. Tonight's match is between Steve Davis and John Parrot at Aylesbury.

Flashback. In this fun cross-country comedy, Kiefer Sutherland stars as a young, by-the-book FBI agent, assigned to escort a 1960s radical to prison. However, his prisoner has other ideas, and sets about using his psychedelic tricks to quite literally alter Sutherland's mind. Maverick actor/director Dennis Hopper, naive in Easy Rider, soft-spoken in Kid Blue and downright scary in David Lynch's Blue Velvet, is more than at home as Sutherland's decadent charge.

5.00pm The Children's Channel. The Adventures of Dynamo Duck. Who's the world's only international and intergalactic secret agent? Why, Dynamo Duck, of course. His never-ending quest for goodness and niceness often leads to a few close calls as a result of sticking his beak where it doesn't belong. But it's not all trap doors and disguises for our dynamic agent. When it comes to the ladies, Dynamo's got a duck in every port. Join him every weekday at this time for adventures like the Case of the Strasbourg pate; it's animation at its best.

10.00pm The Discovery Channel. Metros of the World. A romantic insight into some of the most interesting railway systems ever created. Art and engineering have combined to produce an assortment of impressions from 10 different cities; the geological wonders and bold artistry of the Stockholm system, the baroque splendour of Moscow and the ultra-sophistication of Washington illustrate the great variety and invention which has sprung from one simple idea. The railways reflect past and present city life, from the buskers of Paris and the dancing girls of Lille to the revellers of the Munich Beer Fest.

8.00pm HVC. Hostages. Three luxuriant gambling palaces set on a beautiful caribbean island are attacked by a gang of well-organised criminals who escape with a fortune. As the police carry out a frantic search for them, the gang splits into three groups; one group heads for the sea, one heads for the heart of the city, and the third makes for a wealthy residential area and embarks on a reign of terror. Can they be stopped? Only Stuart Whitman of Cimmaron Strip fame knows the answer.

11.20am The Movie Channel.
The Inn of the Sixth Happiness. Lovely Ingrid Bergman stars as English servant girl Gladys Aylward, who became a missionary in pre-World War II China. In a courageous climax to her arduous, good-spirited work, she leads a group of orphaned children through perilous enemy territory and across the mountains to safety. A dazzling cast includes Curt Jurgens, Richard Wattis, and young Tsai Chin as Aylward's adopted daughter; sadly, though, this remarkable movie was to be the last film performance from the highly-talented Robert Donat.

10.30pm Bravo. Isle of the Dead. '201 blood-curdling scenes you'll never tear out of your mind' warned the billboards of the day, and they were surely right! Boris Karloff is at it again, this time as a crazed general in charge of a plague stricken island community in the Balkans whose burden is made heavier by the revelation that one of their number is a vampire. Another timeless terror show from Val Lewton, also starring Ellen Drew and the original Jason Robards.

Travelling Man. John Lithgow stars in this neat comedy-drama as a veteran travelling salesman whose routine is disrupted when a young rookie (played by Jonathan Silverman) is put on his route. Assigned to teach him the tricks of the trade, Lithgow is astonished by the newcomer's lack of scruples, which causes much friction between them on their daily rounds. However, respite for Lithgow arrives in the form of a tentative prospective romance with Margaret Colin.

Today's Choice

8.00pm Bravo. Oliver Twist.
Don't miss David Lean's dazzling cinematic version of the classic Dickens novel about the fate of a young orphan who falls into the hands of criminals in low-life London. As you'd expect, there are fine performances from Alec Guinness as Fagan and wild-eyed Robert Newton as Bill Sykes, but there are also nice touches with Kay Walsh as Nancy and John Howard Davies as young Oliver.

Today's Choice

8.05pm The Movie Channel. Mountains of the Moon. This thrilling epic drama follows Victorian explorer Richard Burton (Patrick Bergin) and his colleague John Hanning Speke (Iain Glen) as they search for the source of the Nile in Africa. Perils-a-plenty litter their path, making for a good deal of Boy's Own adventure, although the personal betrayal of Burton by the over-zealous Speke proves to be the dramatic crux of this sweeping and courageous tale. Directed by Bob Rafelson, best known for more radical avant garde work like Five Easy Pieces, The Postman Always Rings Twice and Black Widow.

1.00am HVC. Pushed Too Far.
The tranquil setting of a small community is disturbed by the arrival of a deranged ex-wrestler who uses his professional fighting skills to wreak havoc among innocent people. When the mayhem develops into murder, the local sheriff tries to enlist the help of an equally local karate instructor. But will the martial arts master be willing to sacrifice his oriental vows of non-violence in order to save the town? No prizes for guessing the correct answer.

Today's Choice

8.30pm Screensport.

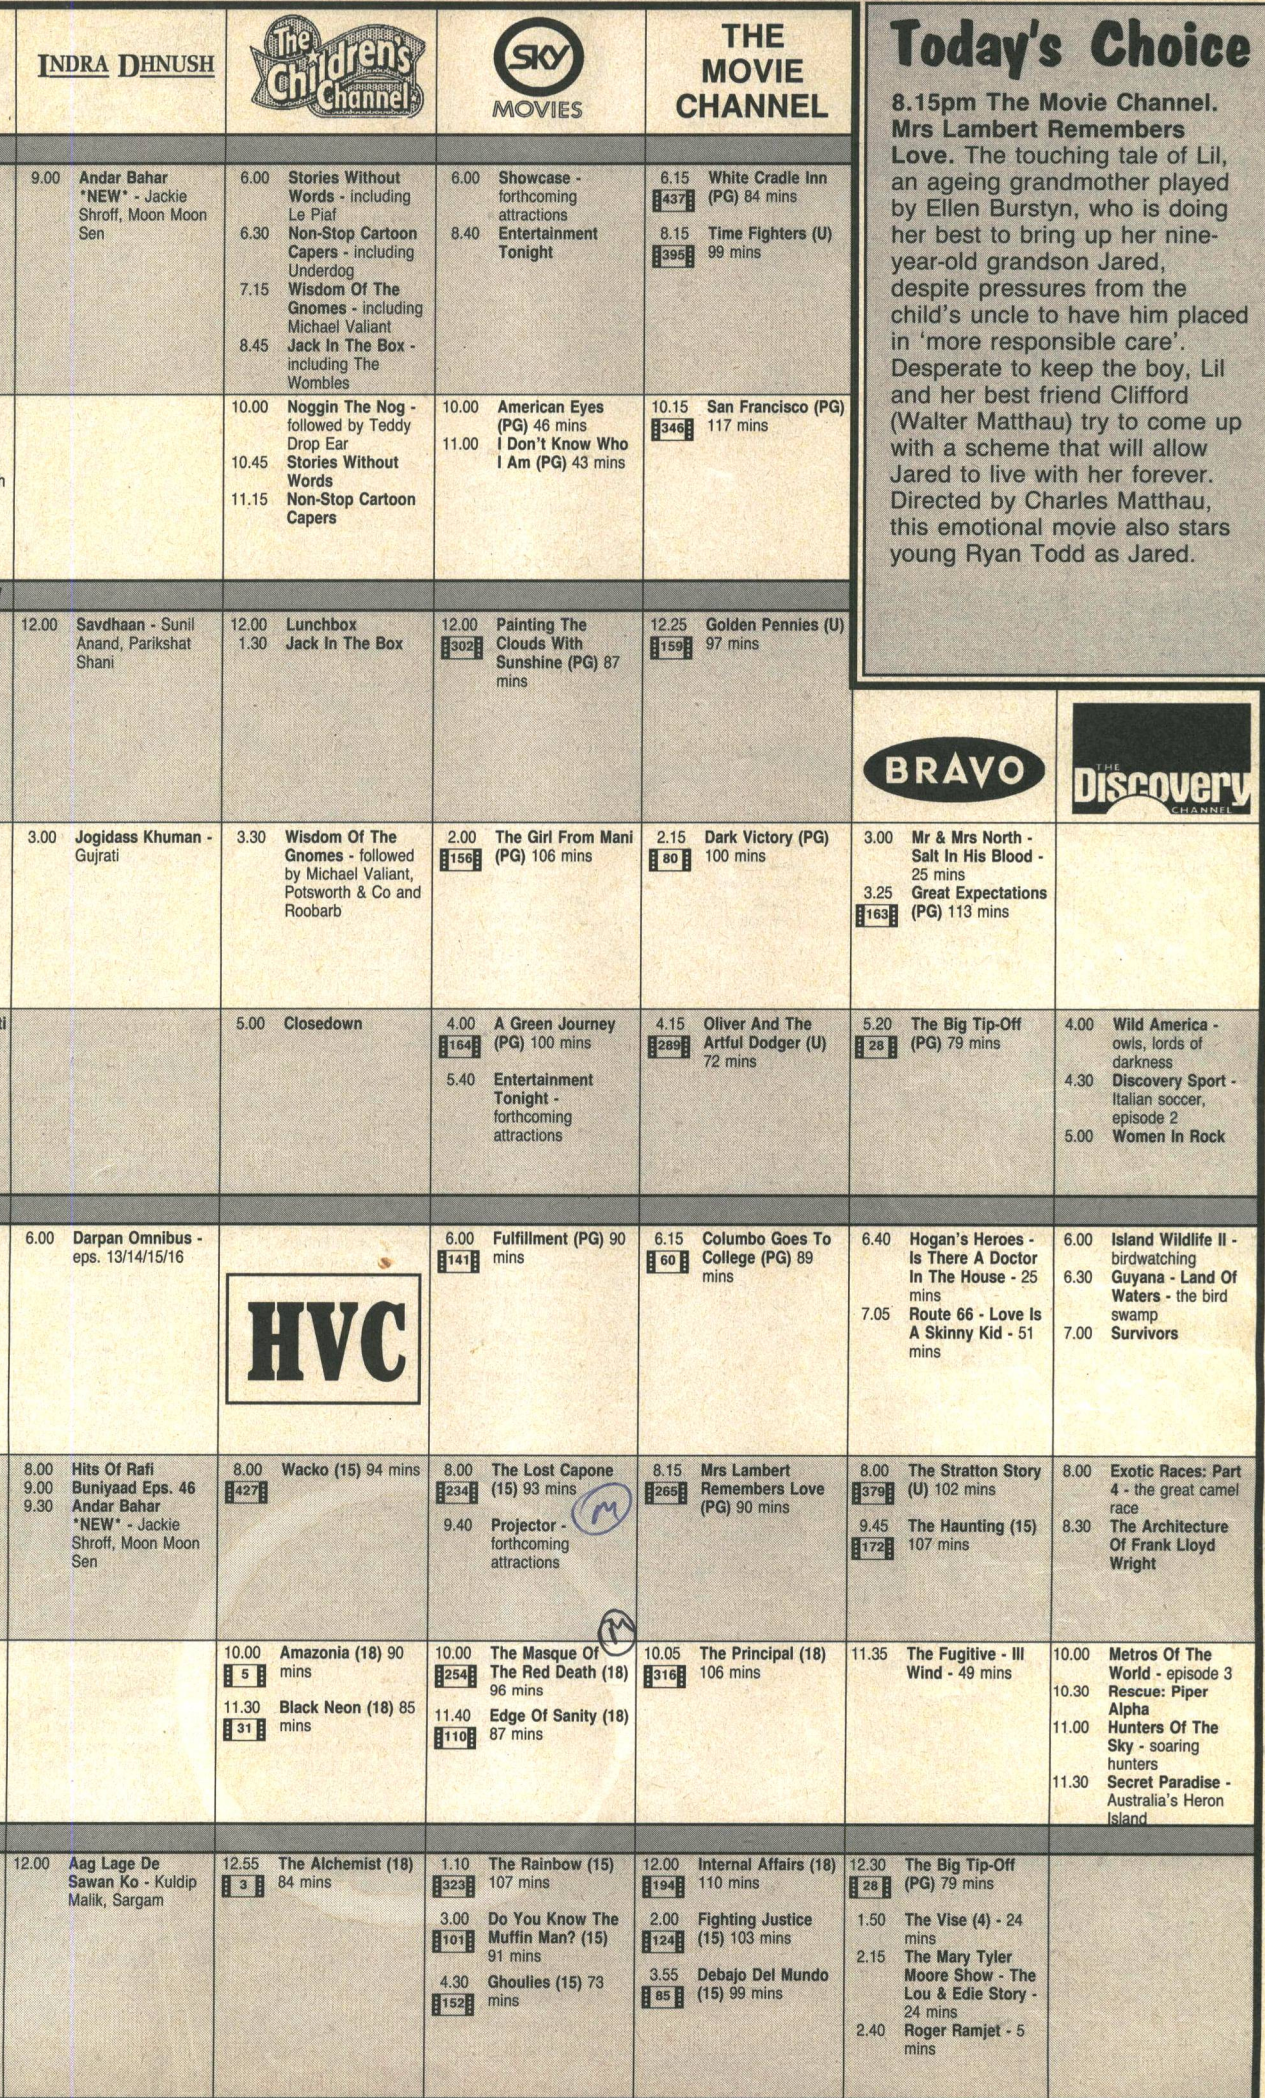

Warsteiner Ski Spezial.

German commentators Hansi Hinterseer and Pirmin Zurbriggen, both ex-world champion alpine skiers, report on previous and forthcoming races on the world cup circuit. Also included in the programme is a behind-the-scenes look at the national teams, a German ski magazine which looks at buying skis, a feature on ski fitness and ski exercises, and a ski portrait which focuses on a different skier each week. And that's not all - a competition is held in every programme with a skiing weekend as prize.

11.00pm HVC. White Darkness. The Hanley School for Girls has a terrifying past. The founding headmaster was killed by a jealous student during one of his philandering affairs, and the school has suffered under a voodoo curse ever since. When a voodoo cult plans a deadly sacrifice, history suddenly begins to repeat itself and the full power of the curse of the voodoo dolls is unleashed - with frightening results. Spellbinding performances from Grace Phillips and Nathalie Gauthier add to the mania.

Today's Choice

8.00pm Sky Movies Plus. The Package. An exciting espionage thriller, in which the ubiquitous Gene Hackman stars as an American army sergeant who is assigned to escort a military prisoner back from Germany to stand trial in the US. Sounds easy, doesn't it? But once back on his own turf, Hackman's charge escapes, setting in motion a chilling conspiracy plot that only Hackman can avert. Tommy Lee Jones is on top form as the dastardly fugitive, with great support from Joanna Cassidy, Dennis Franz and John Heard.

Too much French polish for England?

THE DIFFERENCE between England's manager Graham
Taylor and his French rival Michel Platini could not be greater.

Taylor was a player of modest ability who made a name for himself in management slogging away in the lower parts of the English League. Platini was a dazzling player, the European Footballer of the Year three years in succession who scored 41 goals in 72 internationals.

▼ Marseille's Jean-Pierre Papin

Taylor was appointed manager after an impressive, though trophy-less, spell at Aston Villa. Platini got his job with no managerial experience listed on his CV.

And once installed Taylor got off to a better start, overseeing just one defeat (to World Champions Germany) out of 15 matches.

The Frenchman stumbled initially. His team lost to Yugoslavia and then Scotland in May 1989.

But that was that. France have not lost a game since and qualified for Sweden next June by winning every single group match.

Platini was named world manager of the year last December while the British press stuck the boot into Taylor for putting together a witless team.

However, the only comparison that really matters can be made this month when the managers' paths cross at Wembley.

France, who have been spearheaded by the fearsome strikeforce of Jean-Pierre Papin and Eric Cantone, are many people's favourites to win the European Championship.

▲ Papin, 'France Football' magazine's European Footballer of the Year, keeps opponents at arm's length

Platini has a settled side that has had a rugged team spirit instilled into it.

After criticism that England were lacklustre and directionless, Taylor will probably want to use such friendlies to establish a pattern of play for Sweden.

But with so many psychological points at stake now, 'friendly' should prove to be a misnomer.
